Dear Licensee:

75 years ago Alabama ratified the Twenty-first Amendment which ended prohibition. Prohibition was meant to reduce the consumption of alcohol, reduce crime, poverty, death rates, and improve the economy and the quality of life. This however, was not the case. The Prohibition amendment was ineffective because it was unenforceable, it increased the rate of alcohol abuse, there was an increase in crime and violence, heavy court workloads and overcrowded jails. Prohibition also denied the state tax revenues from the sale of alcohol. Following the era of Prohibition, each state individually decided how alcoholic beverages would be managed within its borders. Alabama citizens demanded rigorous control of alcohol and in 1937 the Board was established by the Alabama Legislature. The Alabama ABC Board was created to promote temperance, to regulate and control the manufacture, purchase, consumption and use of alcoholic beverages.

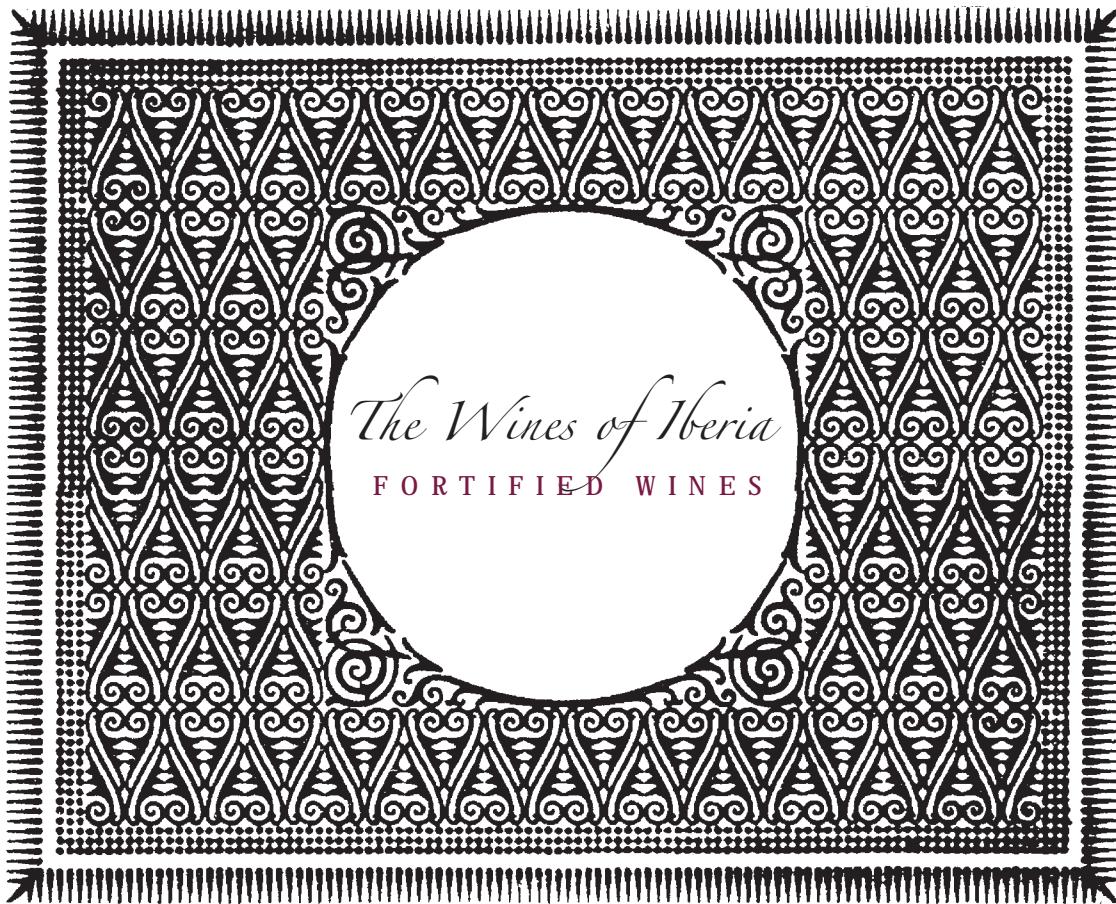

Let's salute those Alabamians who voted three-quarters of a century ago to repeal the policy of Prohibition. This past fiscal year, the legal sale of alcoholic beverages generated approximately $187,000,000.000 for the State of Alabama. Recipients of these funds include the Department of Mental Health, the Special Education Trust Fund, the Department of Human Resources and the General Fund.

Our continued success in generating much needed revenue for the State of Alabama depends on your ability to keep your shelves stocked with fast-moving, profitable items. We encourage you to get your orders in early and to please let us know how we can better serve you. The Board, our employees and I, realize that you are essential to our mission and hope that our services and products are meeting your needs. As always, customer service remains a top priority. Please feel free to contact my office any time you have questions or need assistance.

The Wines of Iberia

FORTIFIED WINES

BY PAMELA DEVINGER

Sherry has been garnering attention from sommeliers, so we are seeing more of it on-premise, especially at Spanish and Iberian-influenced restaurants, but off-premise growth has been sluggish. Steve Metzler, president of Classical Wines, the importer of Bodegas Hidalgo-LaGitana, says, "It has been hard to grow the sherry category. There has been no noticeable increase in sales overall, but we're pleased that over the last 20 years sales have been steady. It's a personal great love of mine and everyone else here at Classical Wines. You get quite jaded once you've had a good Manzanilla."

Katrin Naelapaa, director of Wines from Spain, adds, "The main source of growth has been on-premise as the promotional efforts have been focused there. These efforts have led to consumption of higher-end sherry and the inclusion of the sherry category on many contemporary and high-end restaurants menus. At retail, I believe that the majority of sherry sales are more in the value category."

Anecdotal evidence suggests that port sales do best around the holiday period. . . . [and] ports such as aged tawny, late bottle vintage, and vintage ports are showing sales hikes. There could be a future trend for white port. As Suzzana Loh at Evaton explains, "We are going to start a program focusing on Offley white port. A classic apertif is white port with tonic and a slice of lemon served over the rocks in a tall glass."

The more exciting fortified wine from Portugal right now is Madeira, a wine that was all the rage in America several centuries ago. "I've noticed that people are much less interested in attending port tastings, but there has been interest in Madeira. It's a story that has enormous pull for Americans because of its ties to history. Washington and Jefferson drank Madeira and chose it to commemorate important events in history," says Bartholomew Broadbent, president of Broadbent Selections Inc.

Doug Polaner, the New York-based distributor for the Madeiras imported by Rare Wine Company, offers, "I find that when promoted, Madeira causes excitement, and now it is finally seeing its day. You can drink Madeira that was made in the early part of the 1800s—it's like drinking the ghost of generations past."

Great tasting, convenient, ready-to-serve drinks make holiday entertaining easier and give you more time to have fun. You can buy everything from margaritas, martinis, mojitos, and mudslides to proprietary cocktails that taste almost as good as if you mixed them from scratch. Serving the pre-mixed drinks in sparkling clean glassware over fresh party ice and garnishing them with fresh fruit will help give them a just-made look and taste.

If you prefer to do some of the mixing yourself, consider using one of the convenient powdered and liquid drink mixes. Bar-Tender's offers mixes for a variety of popular cocktails, while Margaritaville liquid mixes make it easy to prepare large quantities of margaritas. Franco's provides mixes for everything from hurricane cocktails to cyclones plus a variety of margarita salts. Mr. and Mrs. T Drink Mix and Holland House also provide mixes for a wide variety of cocktails, and Rose's offers liquid mixes for more unusual drinks like blue raspberry, cranberry twist, mango, and sour apple cocktail, while Coco Casa offers a specialty mix for piña coladas. Look for ready-to-serve drinks as well as powdered and liquid mixes wherever alcoholic beverages are sold.

If you're hosting a large party, consider serving a punch in addition to mixed drinks. Let guests serve themselves from a silver, glass, or other decorative punchbowl. Here's a simple punch that you can make ahead of time so all you have to do is pour it into the serving bowl the day of your party.

Holiday Punch

Makes 60 (5-ounce) servings

1 quart bourbon

3 cups water

Juice of 1 dozen oranges

Juice of 1 dozen lemons

1 cup sugar

Orange slices

Lemon slices

Small jar maraschino cherries

Ice ring

Combine the bourbon, water, orange and lemon juices, and sugar in a large mixing bowl; stir to dissolve the sugar. Add the orange and lemon slices, and pour the mixture into large containers; refrigerate for at least 24 hours. Just before serving, pour the punch into the punchbowl; add the cherries and ice ring.

THE MORE EXCITING FORTIFIED WINE
FROM PORTUGAL RIGHT NOW IS MADEIRA, A WINE THAT WAS ALL THE RAGE IN AMERICA SEVERAL CENTURIES AGO.

Basic Madeira Cocktail

Serve in a chilled old-fashioned glass.

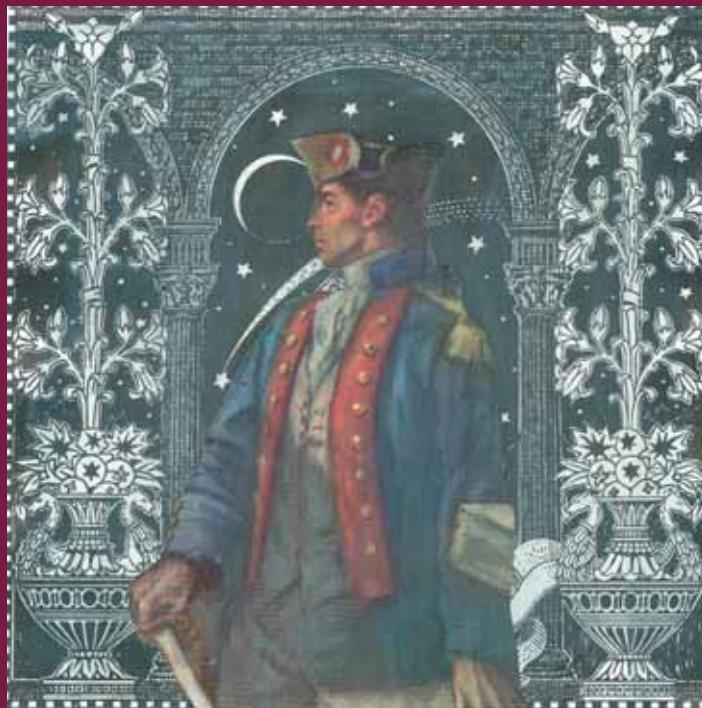

1½-2 ounces Madeira
1½-2 ounces blended whiskey
1-1¼ teaspoon grenadine
Dash of freshly squeezed lemon juice
Orange slice

Fill a shaker half-full with fresh cracked ice; add the Madeira, whiskey, grenadine, and lemon juice, and shake vigorously. Pour the mixed drink into the prepared glass, and garnish with the slice of orange.

Basic Madeira Punch

1 bottle Madeira
4-6 ounces brandy or flavored brandy
Confectioner's sugar to taste
1 quart chilled club soda
Ice ring
Slices of lemons, oranges, peaches, strawberries, and other fruit of choice

Combine the Madeira and brandy in a punch bowl; add sugar to taste. Add the club soda, and stir gently to mix. Garnish with the ice ring and sliced fruits of choice.

M A D E I R A

A Luscious Sip of Times Past

Portuguese explorer Gonslaves Zarco put the North Atlantic island of Madeira on the map in 1418 when a storm blew him off course—and the containers of Madeira wine “baked” in the holds of 17th-century ships when they sailed through the tropics on their way to the New World, giving the wine a distinct rich taste that put it on the most-wanted list of beverages. Today the soft, rich, “pleasant burnt” wine that Americans used to toast the Declaration of Independence and the inauguration of President George Washington is enjoyed worldwide.

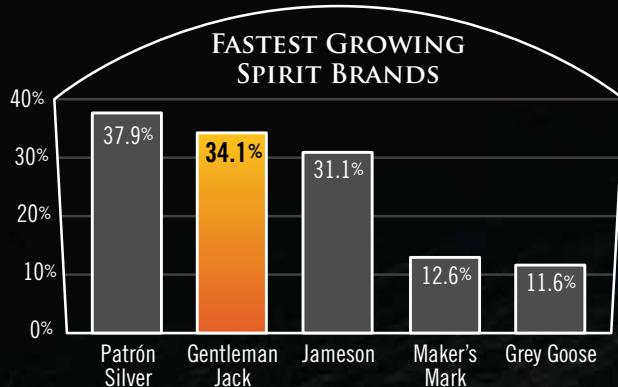

Madeiras range from very dry to very sweet so be sure to sample several varieties to determine your personal favorite. For tradition's sake—and to fully experience the complex aroma and taste of this fortified wine, try sipping Madeira slowly from a snifter held gently in the palm of your hand. Then try mixing it with other ingredients.

Ginning Up Sales

"GIN IS FINALLY GAINING RESPECT, STARTING WITH BARTENDERS AND TRICKLING DOWN TO CONSUMERS."

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the July/August 2007 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

BY MICHAEL SCHERER

After years of struggling, the gin category may finally be poised to make a comeback, regaining the prominence it once enjoyed in the lexicon of America cocktail culture. . . . One of the first victims of vodka's explosive growth over the past few decades, gin is now benefiting from the growing consumer interest in flavored vodkas and other uniquely flavored spirits in the past several years.

"What's driving it, no new news, is the cocktail culture," notes Wayne Hartunian, global brand director of Seagram's Gin. "Gin benefits because of its rich heritage. Even if vodka does well, consumers are looking for variety and uniqueness. Vodka may have more mainstream appeal, but gin's flavor profile is unique."

"The vodka trend is going to have a grip on cocktail culture for quite some time," agrees Giles Woodier, brand director for Bombay Sapphire, "but gin offers more excitement."

Vodka, in fact, first gained favor with consumers precisely because it lacked flavor. It began to overtake gin as the primary ingredient in a martini because it isn't so distinctive, and it grew in popularity due to its blandness, its chameleon-like ability to blend with practically anything. Gin, by its very definition a juniper-flavored spirit, fell out of favor.

While the generation that grew up in a gin-dominated martini culture switched allegiance to vodka, younger drinkers who grew up on sodas and flavored teas and fruit drinks began demanding more flavorful cocktails and more flavored spirits to experiment with, fueling the flavored-vodka movement. As their palates have grown more sophisticated, they have been willing to try and experiment with more varied and bolder flavors, including gin.

DISCERNING DRINKERS

"Gin drinkers tend to cross over into a lot of different categories," Woodier enthuses. "There's still a great sense of discovery among gin drinkers, who pride themselves on their sense of discernment. They're willing to stand out from the vodka crowd and make a singular choice."

Consumers also have shown an express interest in products that project a premium image. While new vodkas generate appeal through upscale packaging and clever marketing, gin brands can leverage consumer interest in heritage, history, and authenticity as well. "It's clear where the category is going," says Marc Strachan, brand director for Tanqueray. "Consumers are looking at premiumization, quality, and heritage."

Consumers' combined interest in premium products and unique flavors hasn't been lost on bartenders, and much of the renewed focus on gin is a result of their experimentation with it. Today's mixologists are playing with fresh, unusual ingredients, using them to create new twists on old classics.

"Bartenders are really embracing gin again," notes James Bruton, marketing director, whiskies and gin at Skyy Spirits, which imports Martin Miller's. "It's the original flavored vodka."

"Bartenders say gin has an interesting flavor and one they can work with in terms of mixing," according to Suzanne Freedman, brand director for Beefeater. "Gin is finally gaining respect, starting with bartenders and trickling down to consumers."

Versatile, Mixable Gin

Gin blends well with other ingredients, making it a mixologist's delight for creating flavorful mixed drinks. Give your favorite mixed drinks a new, fresh taste with gin!

Gin and Orange-Flavored Champagne Cocktail

Serve in a chilled collins or other tall serving glass.

$\frac{1}{2}$ - $\frac{3}{4}$ ounce gin
 $\frac{1}{2}$ ounce vodka
 $\frac{1}{2}$ ounce blue curaçao
Splash of orange juice
Dash of sour mix
Champagne

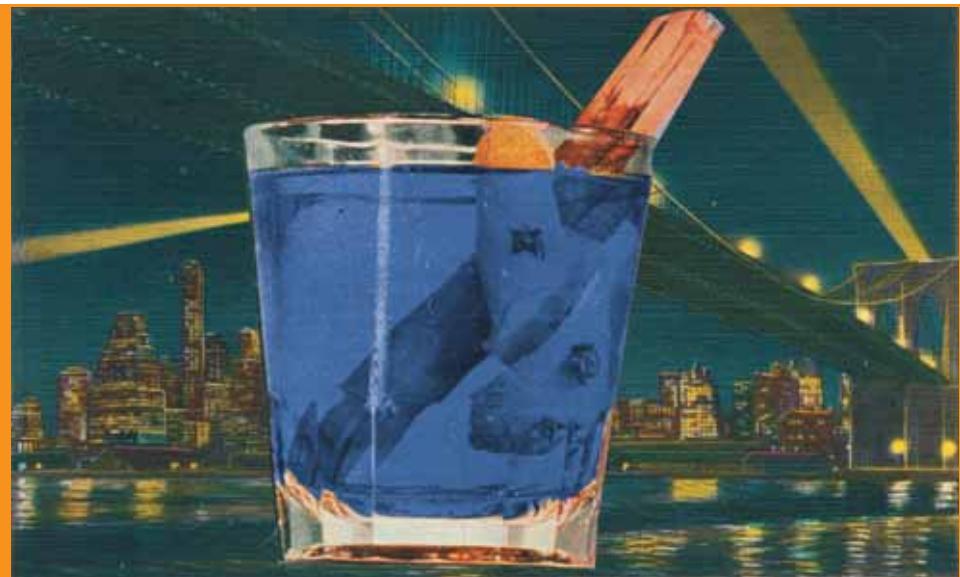

Fill the chilled serving glass with clean, fresh ice. Add the gin, vodka, blue curaçao, orange juice, and sour mix; stir gently to mix. Fill the glass with champagne.

Gin and Liqueur Refresher

Serve in a chilled old-fashioned glass.

$2\frac{1}{2}$ - 3 ounces chilled gin
 $2\frac{1}{2}$ - 3 ounces chilled liqueur of choice
Fruit garnish to complement the liqueur

Place clean, fresh ice in the chilled serving glass. Add the gin and liqueur and stir gently to blend. Garnish with the complementary fruit.

Gin-Flavored Bloody Mary

4-6 ounces tomato juice
2 ounces gin
1- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoons lemon juice
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Several dashes of Tabasco sauce
1 teaspoon freshly grated horseradish squeezed dry, if desired
Pinch of white or black pepper
1-2 pinches celery salt
 $\frac{1}{2}$ - 1 teaspoon dried or fresh chopped dill
Celery stalk with leaves

Combine all of the ingredients except the celery stalk in a shaker with ice; shake gently. Pour (strain, if desired) the mixed drink into a chilled serving glass; garnish with the celery stalk.

Gin Martini

Serve in a chilled cocktail glass.

1 $\frac{1}{2}$ ounces chilled gin
Generous dash dry vermouth
Generous dash sweet vermouth
Olive or cocktail onion

Pour the gin into a mixing glass or shaker half filled with ice; add dashes of dry and sweet vermouth (vary the amount of vermouth depending on whether it needs to be a dry or wet/sweet martini). Stir or shake gently to mix and immediately strain into a chilled cocktail glass over fresh ice, if desired. Garnish with an olive or onion on a pick.

Great Scot!

BY MICHAEL SHERER

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from "Sweet Innovation" in the March/April 2008 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

In their heyday, back in the 1980s when Gordon Gekko and his cronies were smoking $100 cigars with their competitors on Wall Street, distillers were selling close to 20 million cases of Scotch whisky in the United States every year. Volume last year was a little more than half that, but after years of decline, the category overall has been flat, and segments of it are experiencing solid growth.

Globally, exports of Scotch are at an all-time high in terms of both volume and sales, according to the Scotch Whisky Association. The category is a mixed bag in the United States right now, but in general a few trends are clearly emerging in the market.

TRENDS

The same phenomenon that has driven sales of high-end vodka, tequila, bourbon, rum, and other spirits is piquing consumer interest in premium Scotch. “Branding is very important to consumers, whether it’s clothing, food, or alcohol,” says Davinia Small, USA business manager for Ardbeg at Moet Hennessy. “People are definitely upgrading based on who and what they want to be and the image they want to project.”

Part of the shift is the cyclical nature of the industry. Brown goods declined during the 1980s and 1990s as vodka became the spirit of choice and grew explosively. Now the tides are turning somewhat as other spirits find favor again. “In the 1990s, we saw the martini and lounge craze,” says Ned Duggan, Dewar’s brand manager, “with cosmopolitans and a rainbow of colors in everyone’s martini glass. There’s been somewhat of a backlash. People are drinking more brown spirits straight. I think the authenticity of many of these brands is driving consumer growth.”

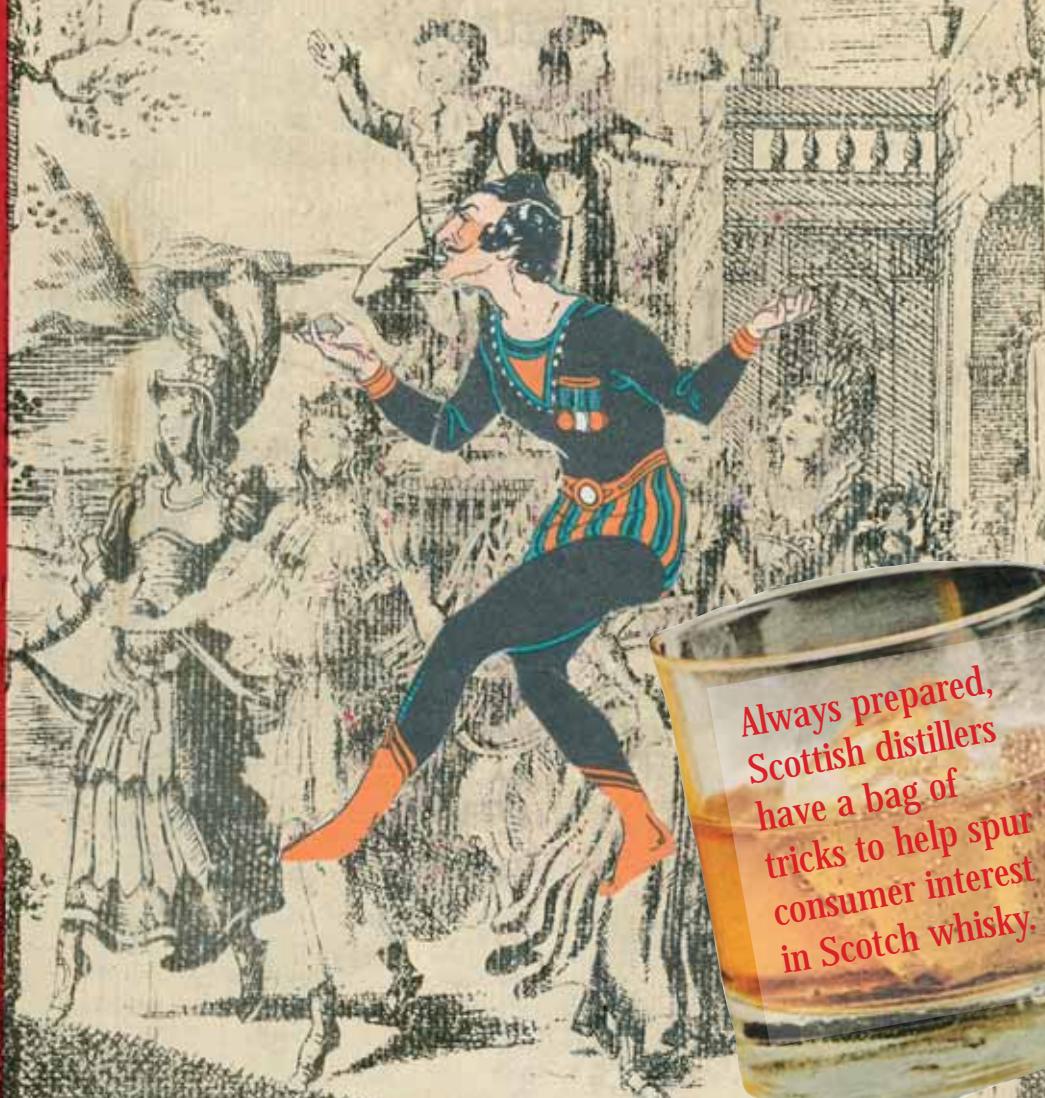

“The high end is driving growth with value brands declining,” adds Bill Toph, vice president Scotch whisky at Diageo. “Premium brands are investing and continuing to grow, similar to other categories. Consumers are more knowledgeable and more interested in premium spirits, and they’re moving to brown spirits as they learn more and develop their palates.”

“Suppliers are innovating to provide those taste experiences,” says Carolyn Ellison, brand manager for Glenfiddich at Wm. Grant. “They’re exploring and experimenting with flavors in premium categories, reaching out for different taste profiles,” agrees Lynn Raynault, brand manager for The Balvenie, also at Wm. Grant. “Other categories are growing too, such as tequila and rum, but single malts offer the robust flavor consumers are looking for.”

SINGULAR FOCUS

While the major blends do their thing to attract a mainstream following, single malts are generating the real excitement in the category. . . . More than 80 distilleries across Scotland produce a wide range of products, giving today's curious and experiential consumers lots to try. "Scotch is really a category of discovery," says Wm. Grant's Ellison. Instead of just tasting smoke, she says, consumers now are sophisticated enough to look for all the other flavors a complex single malt offers, like vanilla, toffee, floral or fruity notes, herbs, and yes even salt and seaweed.

"There's been real growth in the fanatical malt whisky aficionado across the board. They're not loyal to favorites—they like trying new things, and they're constantly looking for the next new release," says Brian Cox, Glenmorangie business director at Moet Hennessy USA. "You can only go so far with vodka. People are bored with it, so they're turning to products like single barrel bourbon and single malt Scotch."

BASIC SCOTCH DRINKS

Scotch and Soda

1½ ounces single malt or blended Scotch
3 ounces club soda

Fill a rocks (old-fashioned) glass with ice. Pour in the Scotch and then the club soda (do not stir—the soda bubbles will mix the ingredients).

Scotch and Water

1½ ounces single malt or blended Scotch
3 ounces water

Fill a rocks (old-fashioned) glass with ice. Pour in the Scotch and then the water; stir gently to mix.

Rusty Nail

1-1½ ounces Scotch
1-1½ ounces Drambuie

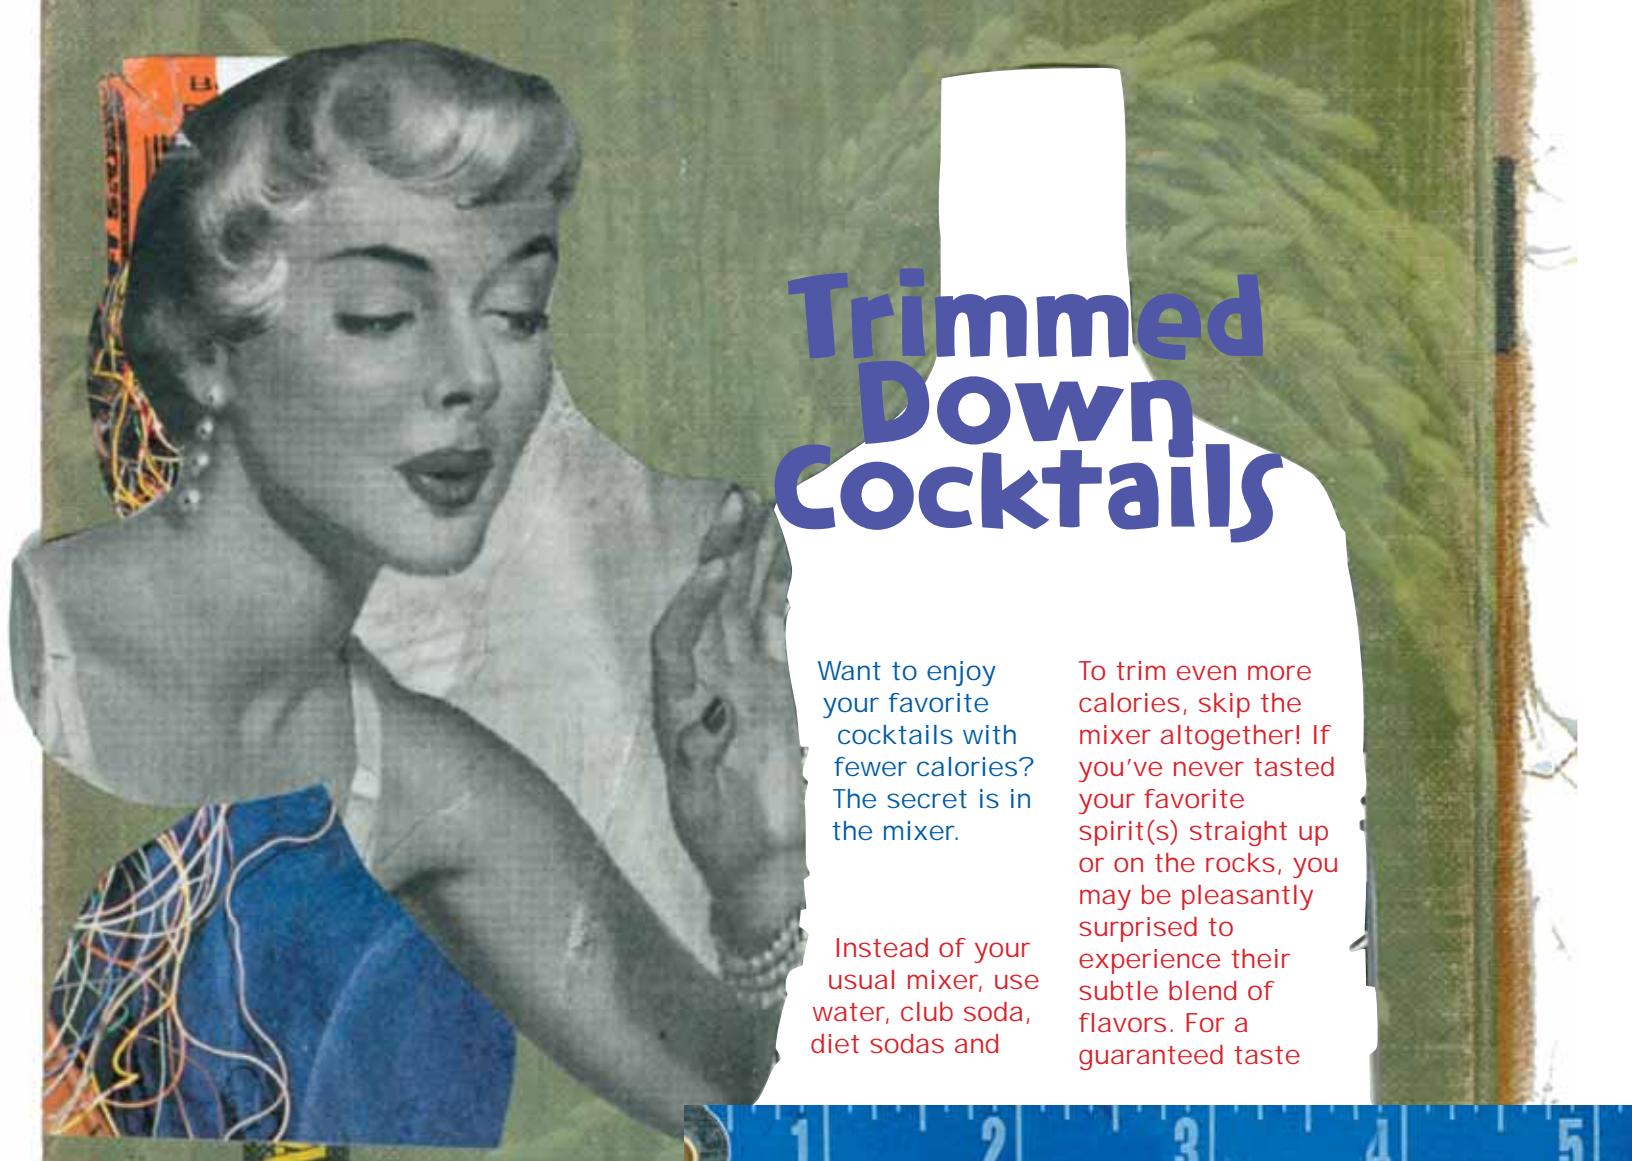

Fill a chilled rocks (old-fashioned) glass half full with ice. Pour the Scotch and Drambuie over the ice and stir gently.

Rob Roy

1½-2 ounces Scotch
Dash sweet vermouth
Dash dry vermouth
Maraschino cherry

Fill a chilled cocktail glass half-full with ice, pour the Scotch and vermouth over the ice and stir to mix OR pour the Scotch and vermouth into a shaker half-filled with ice, shake vigorously, and strain into a chilled cocktail glass. Garnish with the cherry.

Variation: Add 1-2 ounces Drambuie, a liqueur made from a secret recipe that includes aged highland malt whiskies, heather honey, and special herbs.

Trimmed Down Cocktails

Want to enjoy your favorite cocktails with fewer calories? The secret is in the mixer.

Instead of your usual mixer, use water, club soda, diet sodas and

To trim even more calories, skip the mixer altogether! If you've never tasted your favorite spirit(s) straight up or on the rocks, you may be pleasantly surprised to experience their subtle blend of flavors. For a guaranteed taste tonic, and low-calorie fruit and vegetable juices. Experiment to see which taste best, and if you lose too much of the original taste, try using half of your usual mixer and half of the lower-calorie beverage. Good lower-calorie choices include light cranberry, lemon, lime, orange, and tomato juices and light lemonade. Also try using sugar-free powdered or liquid mixers and sugar-free syrups.

treat, try some of the flavored gins, rums, and vodkas. They now come in every flavor under the sun including fresh-picked apple, banana, black cherry, blueberry, coconut, cranberry, grape, lime, orange, passion fruit, peach, pear, pineapple, plum, pomegranate, raspberry, and strawberry as well as rich vanilla and decadent chocolate.
